

Tibet

Fun fact for kids

Tibet is known as the "Roof of the World" because it is located on the world's highest plateau.

Mount Everest, the highest peak on Earth, straddles the border between Tibet and Nepal.

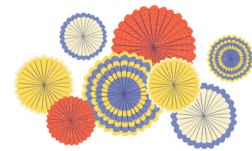

The Dalai Lama, Tibet's spiritual leader, is one of the most recognized religious figures worldwide.

Tibetan is a unique language with its own script, used in religious texts and daily communication.

Yaks are central to Tibetan culture, providing transportation, milk, and wool.

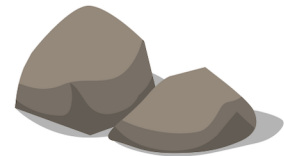

Tibetans celebrate numerous colorful festivals, such as Losar (Tibetan New Year) and Saga Dawa.

Tibetan medicine, an ancient practice, uses natural herbs and minerals for healing.

Major rivers like the Brahmaputra, Indus, and Mekong originate from the Tibetan Plateau.

Mani stones, inscribed with prayers and mantras, are common throughout Tibet as spiritual offerings.

Tibetan monks often create intricate sand mandalas as part of their spiritual practices.

The Qiangtang Nature Reserve in Tibet is one of the largest protected areas in the world.

Tibet has its own traditional cuisine, including dishes like momo (dumplings).