

PEACOCK

FUN FACT FOR KIDS

Peahens, on the other hand, have more subdued, brownish plumage, which helps them blend into their surroundings and protect their young.

Male peacocks fan their colorful tail feathers and shake them to produce a rattling sound to attract females.

In the wild, peafowl typically live around 15-20 years. They are social birds and often live in small groups.

Peafowl's excellent vision helps them spot predators, find food, and notice mate's plumage details.

Peafowl typically roost in trees at night to avoid predators. Their loud calls can often be heard at dawn and dusk.

Peafowl are native to India and Sri Lanka but have been introduced to many other parts of the world due to their popularity as ornamental birds.
